Design and inspiration

The Chumbes Cushion is a sumptuous accessory created by Dutch textile designer Mae Engelgeer. A lively addition to any sofa or lounge chair, its very intricate stripe pattern is inspired by the Chumbe Inga, a traditional Colombian garment. The cushion features different hand-woven motifs on front and back that have a ribbed structure, making it a joy to touch. Thanks to the metallic threads woven into the cotton, the cushion has a gentle lustrous shine. The Chumbes collection also includes a cylinder cushion and a large layer cushion.

About the designer

Dutch designer Mae Engelgeer felt always drawn to textiles – from her school days through her studies at the Amsterdam Fashion Institute to her Masters in applied art at the Sandberg Instituut. Since opening her studio in 2013, she has been driven by her interest in traditional craft techniques. Using yarns, colours, patterns and fabrics, she pushes the boundaries of textile production to adapt old techniques for the modern day. Mae Engelgeer's signature style combines subtle colour palettes, patterns and linear elements.

Craft and manufacturing

Each cushion is hand-woven in small ateliers in Colombia using virgin wool. The artesanías, as the craftswomen are known there, produce the textiles on a horizontal loom. As they weave a different pattern for the front and back of the cushion, they use at least two different techniques to create one cushion. Hence, it takes up to ten days for the women artisans to make one cushion.

Care instructions

Please use a professional cleaning service for this product. The dimensions can vary minimally as each cushion is made by hand. Do not alter it yourself, as this could damage the fabric irreversibly.
